IN A FEW WORDS

Dear HVTC,

How do you explain to someone why you would train all year, pay $525 for registration a year in-advance, $900 for lodging, $400 for food/travel, and then race all day in the relentless rain from the sound of the cannon 'til the moment you cross the finish line of the Ironman? Answer... You can't! See ya out there.

Sincerely,
Mark H. Wilson
Professional Life & Triathlon Coach

Isn't it fun to meet new folks; discover their likes/dislikes, talents/skills? You may even stumble upon the fact that you and your newfound friend have a common hobby, like triathlon. Have you ever met one of those folks who's got such raw talent that they don't even realize it themselves?! Some people are blessed with gifts that go unnoticed until later in life when they decide to make a life-change and enter a local sprint tri. So is the case for our Featured Athlete of the Month, Lana Shannon; she's got plenty of spunk and it's only a matter of time before her day in the triathlon sun arrives. Let's find-out more!

Interestingly, Lana was born in the supposed "Mecca" of triathlon; Boulder, Colorado. She attended McClintock High School in Tempe, Arizona and went-on to higher education at Arizona State University and studied Accounting. While in high school she was a sparkling gymnast; she was very committed and dedicated but genetically built too long. No matter, she could run fast, too! The track coach always tried to convince her to join the team; after all, she could run a mile in 5:26!!! Nice. Oddly, her dislike of loud noises (the start pistol) kept her from joining and her speed was never developed.

Currently, Lana lives in Ridgefield, Connecticut and is getting married to her long-time beau Anthony Corsano on August 3rd...congratulations!!! Lana is blessed with two beautiful daughters; Kayla (17) and Chloe (14) in addition to her beloved doggies; Hazel (Newfoundland) and also Henry & Charlie (Shih Tzus). Lana owns a business called CWI; it's a chameleon-like company that provides branded products to customers. It services major Fortune 1000 companies through their corporate channel as well as direct to consumer and small businesses through e-commerce marketing. Lana single-handedly transformed the culture of her company and it is now on a path of massive expansion! Cool. When she's not building her empire, Lana enjoys reading; her lifetime goal is to read the Top 100 Novels (as suggested by the New York Times). She also enjoys fun-time and eating chocolate with her lifelong friend Lisa from Arizona. Lana is also a self-proclaimed "groupie" of the band called The Cure. However, the most interesting and perhaps surprising tid-bit is that Lana was really into the punk rock/gothic music scene as it emerged in the early 1980's; in fact, she even sported a Mohawk that was sometimes black, sometimes white, and sometimes fuchsia. Oh boy; thank goodness we wear swim caps!

Lana's first sprint triathlon was in her hometown at the Ridgefield Triathlon. How she decided to do the race is beautiful; each September, Lana and her daughters take time to evaluate themselves. They look at the past year and see where they shined and where they fell short of their potential. They accept themselves and let go of the past and create goals for the next year; this may include some sort of cool art project depicting their hopes and dreams for the future, etc. That's when Lana decided to do a sprint triathlon; she already ran 10 miles a week and figured it wouldn't be too difficult to put together the rest. She enjoyed the training so much that she declared her goal was to complete 6 tri's by year's end. That's when she found HVTC on the internet! Since then, she's completed; Nautica South Beach (Miami, FL), HVTC Summer Tri-Series, Women's Tri (Farmington, CT), and the SBR Triathlon (Harriman, NY-1st F40-44).

Most of the folks in her office think she's lost her marbles for doing triathlon; but since she's the boss, everyone's extremely supportive! Lana loves thinking about triathlon while at work, but knows she needs to stay focused at the office in order to afford all of her new tri-toys; "I'm spending loads of cash on things I never knew existed two years ago!" One of the best things about triathlon for Lana is the variety in training; it's challenging, both physically and mentally. But the greatest of all are the "super cool people." She's discovered the highs and lows of the sport, too; I feel strong and proud on good days, super slow and untalented on others.” However, it doesn’t stop her from constantly encouraging others to try the sport.

Lana has become a good triathlete (and she’s just getting started!), but being in the sport has really transformed her life in so many ways that she never could have expected. She has met amazing people from different walks of life that have inspired her or taught her something new. There are so many new faces in her life; each one she feels truly honored to have met. Triathlon has helped her to value her free-time, believe in herself, become a successful business-woman, and lastly to give more love to her children and fiancé. Lana clearly stated her triathlon goals last July “Get faster and place in races!” When the goal became a reality at Harriman State Park it was surreal for her. Now, she’s setting her sights on bigger goals; complete an Olympic distance tri in 2009, ride across the country, become a successful novelist and retire in 2012. Mohawk or not, she’s gonna make it! Thanks, Lana.

THE GOOD DOCTOR SAYS

By Dr. David Ness, C.C.S.P.®, A.R.T.® Certified

Runners Knee, the symptom of imbalance. Is it in you, or your training?

Runner’s knee is the common term for patella femoral dysfunction, or patella femoral pain syndrome. This syndrome is usually caused by the knee cap not tracking correctly in the groove in the thigh bone (Femur). When the knee cap does not track correctly (It can go too far to the inside or outside) the cartilage gradually wears down causing arthritic changes on the underside of the kneecap and Femur. This causes a generalized pain around or under the knee cap, and can also cause swelling in the knee after workouts.

One of most common causes of this painful condition are muscular imbalances where one head of the Quadriceps muscle either pulls too much on the knee cap, or is not pulling enough on the knee cap. This causes the knee cap to be pulled either more to that side, or to the other side. An example of this imbalance is when the VMO (medial head of the Quadriceps) is weak. This causes the knee cap to be pulled laterally and will cause a breakdown of the cartilage of the knee. Another common cause is the opposite type of pulling, medially. This occurs if the lateral head of the quadriceps is weak, or if you have weakness of the Tensor Fascia Lata muscle which controls the Iliotibial Band and the lateral side of the knee. Prolonged weakness of these structures can also cause improper tracking of the patella thus causing degeneration of the cartilage of the knee cap.

Hudson Valley Triathlon Club

Other causes of improper tracking of the kneecap are not having the proper support in your shoe for either pronating or supinating. This lack of support causes the angle at the knee to increase or decrease medially and laterally, causing improper patellar tracking. This will eventually lead to degenerative changes to the cartilage of the kneecap, and internally affecting the menisci both medially and laterally. As mentioned in some of my previous articles running on a crowned or canted surface will cause a leg length discrepancy. Running frequently under this condition without getting the same amount of time on the opposite side will also cause improper tracking of the kneecap, and thus cause degeneration of the undersurface of the kneecap. Also, running on canted surfaces frequently can cause ITB syndrome, and other injuries.

Treatment for this condition includes ice and NSAID's (Advil) for swelling after running or workouts, strengthening of the weak areas to bring back balance in the knee and allow for proper tracking of the kneecap, orthotics for those who have too much arch, or not enough arch. If the aforementioned does not resolve the problem deep tissue massage or active release techniques treatment to the muscles is recommended to remove adhesions that may have built up in the areas of weakness or improper biomechanics. Ultimately if all of the above fails, and x-rays or MRI exams confirm arthritic changes of the kneecap, surgery could be done to smooth the undersurface of the kneecap.
